

Amy Cronkwright

FINANCIAL ADVISOR

Originally from Simcoe, a small town in southwestern Ontario, Amy Cronkwright happily “fell into” helping people with their finances in the ‘90s.

About thirty years ago, Amy was working in a microbiology lab at an Ottawa hospital as a Medical Laboratory Technologist; however this was interrupted when the widespread health care cut was put into place.

While searching for a fresh profession, Amy was approached by her bank about a position with them as a teller. She accepted the role, and as soon as she started she discovered a new passion: assisting people with their finances.

Professionally, Amy’s mind is results oriented; and personally, she derives a lot of satisfaction from helping others. This pairing creates the perfect foundation for a Financial Advisor.

Although fairly quiet and reserved, Amy’s passion for what she does (combined with her close attention to detail, her perfectionism, and her sense of humour) rings through loud and clear.

While she loves working with all of her clients, Amy feels especially connected to young people just starting out, and older single women who are separated, or who have been widowed.

When Amy isn’t putting her mind to her clients’ financial interests, you can find her spending time with her two amazing sons, or with family and friends at the cottage.
